

Anca-Diana Barbu is a dynamic professional motivated by action and results. She has a strong interest in sustainable development and has dedicated her career to finding adequate responses to two of the most important challenges of our time: climate change and clean energy. She currently employs her strong management, analytical and communication skills as a Project Manager at the European Environmental Agency. In her role, she develops analysis to track the energy transition in Europe. Her current focus includes energy efficiency, policy evaluation, energy scenarios/projections, and climate change mitigation. She develops and maintains contacts and cooperation with relevant international organizations and programs (UNFCCC, IPCC, IEA/OECD, Energy Charter, etc.).
